City of Edmonds Launches New City Website

Updated, Easier-To-Use Site with Events Calendar Helps City Continue to Improve Communications

(Edmonds - WA) The City of Edmonds launched its new and improved city website – www.edmondswa.gov - on Monday, March 23rd as part of its mission to enhance communications. After several years the previous website had become overloaded with outdated information and links, while the software platform that served as the foundation for the website had become obsolete. Not only has an up-to-date platform been used, but the new website has a fresh look and feel, with a more user-friendly interface and functionalities.

“I’m thrilled to see the new and improved website and trust it will be a breath of fresh air to its many users,” remarked Mayor Dave Earling, adding, “The City’s website has become the principal means of communicating with our constituents so it’s important to offer an updated, user-friendly experience.”

The updated City website comes on the heels of the new tourism website, www.visitedmonds.com, launched last Thanksgiving, as well as the City’s Facebook page released in mid-January.

“Between our new City website, Facebook page and the tourism website, we’re hopeful that the community will find easier access than ever to important and interesting information about the City, community, and events and activities,” says Economic Development and Community Services Director Patrick Doherty. “One key feature of both the City and tourism websites is an easy-to-use and informative arts and culture calendar that informs both residents and visitors alike of the full array of arts, cultural and performance events in town.”

The public is encouraged to visit the new website – www.edmondswa.gov – and offer any comments or helpful remarks, especially in these early days when final touches are still being made. Comments may be offered via a dedicated feedback form found at the bottom of the front page entitled “Website Feedback.”
